TUESDAY.....MAY 9, 1899.

It is the sense of the meeting that the conference in Richmond, on May 10th, should not be for or against any candidate, but rather strictly for the advancement of a great cause dearer to the people than any man or men.-Resolution adopted by the Democrats of Southampton.

If you are a Democrat and are in sym pathy with the purpose of the May meeting, come to it, whether you have been elected a delegate or not. That you will have the right to do so, is perfectly well, understood.

THE PERSONNEL OF IT.

Among the things that have been said to the prejudice of the May meeting is that it proposes to ask the State Committee of our party to transcend its powers. Such a proceeding is not at all likely. The callers of the conference are men who have long enjoyed the confidence of the Democratic party of Virginia, are experienced in public affairs, and are as devoted to Democracy as any may safely rely upon them to know what they may properly ask the State Com-

Among the signers of the call for tomorrow's conference, those best known in this vicinity are Congressmen John Lamb, of Henrico; ex-Congressman George Wise, and the Hon, W. F. Reddy, of Richmond; P. V. Cogbill, Esq., of Chesterfield, and William Kean, of Louisa; also, Attorney-General Montague, whose residence at the capital, and long nequaintance with our people make him guite at home here.

Is it likely that these gentlemen would father any scheme asking the State Committee to do any foolish or improper thing? Would they wish to make themselves absurd? Of course not.

And then among the other signers we find the names of William A. Jones, John F. Rixey, Henry C. Stuart, Claggett B. Jones, John Goode, J. C. Parker, William A. Anderson, Joseph E. Willard, George W. Le Cato, Eppa Hunton, Jr., B. F. Buchanan, Alvin T. Embrey, N. W. Westcott, R. Walton Moore, Frank T. Glasgow, John T. Lovell, J. F. Bryant, J. B. Prince, Thomas G. Elam, etc., etc.

Is it probable that any of these would support any foolish or mischievous proposition addressed to our State Committee. Certainly not.

Again we see among the names of delegates elected from Richmond those of such men, 3.8 C. O. Savilie, Cunningham Hall, Marx Gunst, S. S. P. Patteson, Sol, Cutchins, B. O. James, James T. Ferriter, F. C. Ebel, Joseph Wallerstein, B. A. Jacob, T. L. Alfriend, E. A. Catlin, S. H. Cottrell, E. C. Walthall, John S. Harwood, Dr. Jud. Wood, J. M. Blanks, William H. Cullingworth, F. A. Bowry, R. T. Lacy, T. B. Murphy, G. K. Pollock, etc.

Do you think they would support any measure not dictated by prudence, party loyalty, and proper respect for our party authorities? It is highly improbable.

The effort to make it appear that the advocates and supporters of the May conference are dangerous characters cannot but be ineffectual. If it be not safe for such honorable, able, and patriotic men as those we have named to assemble and discuss the affairs of the Democratic party in Virginia, then are we upon the brink of a political precipice, where the slightest discussion may hurl us to destruction.

So far from fearing any hurt to our party from such men as will compose the conference to assemble here to-morrow. we believe their influence and action will be inspiring and invigorating, and that the Democrats of Virginia will hereafter be able more proudly than ever before to claim that their party is the people's party, in which every voter's voice may be heard-a party where the exercise of the right of discussion and protest or petition is not only tolerated, but is en-rouraged. Nor do we regard it as by any means certain that the May meeting will have occasion to ask our State Committee to take any action at all. We, of course, maintain that to-morrow's meeting, or any other body of Democrats, or any

the right to petition our State Committee But in the opinion of some of the most sagacious leaders in this movement (Attorney-General Montague among them) the best course for the May meeting to adopt would be to put itself upon record, most emphatically, in favor of the election of senators by the people, and then ommit the matter of obtaining expression of the preferences of voters to the local authorities of our party-that is to say, to the several county and city committees, who have full power to act in the premises. So, it must be seen by all careful and unprejudiced observers that there is not the slightest probability that the May meeting will undertake to do unreasonable things, or that it will ask our State Committee to transcend its powers, or that it will lend itself to the advancement of any personal interests. Indeed, as to the last point we have the admission of the Charlottesville Progress, in its Sunday's issue, that many of those who will participate in to-morrow's conference are without objectionable bias.

HIND SIDE BEFORE.

The first sign of the outbreak of the regularly recurring row in the Ohio Republican camp was made the other day by Governor Bushnell, when he went for Hanna in this fashion;

"Whenever Senator Hanna finds himself getting the worst of it he runs be-hind the President and tries to make out that the administration is being as that the administration is being assaried. Had it not been for the tight hold he had upon the coat-tails of McKinley he would never have succeeded in being dragged into public life. When we seek to elimiinto public life. When we seek to eliminate Hannaism from the Republican party, we do not thereby cast any reflection upon the Republican party."

This promises that the row this year is going to be much flercer than usual, and for that we are thankful. It is to be hoped that it will become so fierce that one faction will swallow the other and then swallow itself.

But we respectfully submit that Governor Bushnell has gotten things hind side publication. This is a long-standing rule before. The fact is that the relations of McKinley and Hanna are just the reverse of those described by Bushnell. It is the President who has been doing, and still continues to do, the coat-tail swinging act, and it is highly probable that but for his grasp upon Hanna's coat-tails he would never have been dragged into the presidential chair.

The finding of the court of inquiry with reference to the conduct of the Seventyfirst New York Regiment, at San Juan are to the effect that the men of the comnand were brave enough, but that number of their senior field officers were to the court, that Colonel Wallace A. Downs, the commander of the regiment, disobeyed his orders and kept his command under fire and out of action for nours; that Lieutenant-Colonel Smith failed to avail himself of the opportunity to respond to the orders of the division commander that the regiment move forward; that Major Whittle was principally concerned for his own safety, and that Captain Elmore F. Austin received an order from the division commander in person and failed to obey it. Colonel Downs and Major Whittle having resigned, nothing is to be done to them, says the New York Sun. Lieutenant Colonel Smith is ordered before an examining board, commonly called a "bouncing board," and Captain Austin is verely reprimanded. It was proposed at one time to court-martial Smith and Whitduty, disobedience of orders, and unmilitary conduct, but the State authorities were advised that they had no power to court-martial, the offences alleged having occurred while the officers were other persons now living. Therefore, we in the service of the United States and on leave of absence from the State service.

> The late Hop. C. L. Scott, of Alabama who was the United States Minister to Venezuela under Mr. Cleveland's first administration, was a native of Virginia, and a brother of Mrs. Harvie Chamberlayne, of this city. He was a son of the distinguished lawyer, Robert G. Scott, and a brother of R. G. Scott, Jr. He went to California in 1849, and won success at the bar, and was twice elected to Congress. He married in Alabama and later made his home there. When the civil war broke out he came to Virginia as an officer of the Fourth Alabama Regiment and rose to the rank of major. He was badly wounded twice. Returning to Alabama. he resumed his profession, and also became prominent in public life. He was widely known and much beloved. His death, which occurred on April 30th, has been the occasion of many eulogiums inthe southern papers.

The Baltimore Sun says:

"The report of the military court which investigated General Miles's charges against the beef supplied to the army during the war with Spain will be regarded by most people as a very neat piece of

Yes. But if Congress does its duty it will appoint an impartial commission that will not only wash off the whitewash, but expose the corruption connected with the beef contracts to its fountain-head.

Furthermore, we do not believe that the people are going to rest satisfied until such a commission has been appointed. The whitewashers have only staved off the evil day that is before all involved in the monumental and hideous piece of jobbery, which will stand as a disgrace to the nation until the jobbers and conspirators have been punished.

They are planning a $10,000 dinner in New York, with which to welcome Dewey on his return home, which, it is said, is to take place before long, now. One hundred citizens are to give this dinner on their own account, independently of anything the city may do, each of the hundred to have the privilege of inviting one guest, and the entertainment is to be on a scale of magnificence commensurate with the brilliance of Dewey's achievements-in other words, at the rate of $50 a plate, it will be perceived. The hero of Manila Bay is reported to have already accepted the invitation to be present at the banquet.

Rev. P. H. Hoge, D. D., now paster of the First Presbyterian church at Wilmington, N. C., has received a unanimous call to the pastorate of the Warren Memorial Presbyterian church, of Louisville, Ky. It is not known yet whether he will accept or not.

The embalmed beef has now received two full official coats of whitewash, and it will keep-in the history of the country and to the shame of our Republican administration.

OPPOSITION PHANTOMS.

To-day will practically see the close what, for a better expression, we term the May conference campaign. any there be who favor the great principle of popular election of United States senators, but who are wavering on the question of attending the conference, because of the contentions advanced the opposition to the movement, it would be well for them to give final and serious consideration to those contentions, with a view of ascertaining in how far they have any substantial basis. With the passing of to-morrow the waverers will nave missed their opportunity to identify themselves prominently with an issue that is as sure to triumph as that they live, move, and have their being They will have thrown away their chance of aiding in pushing Virginia again into the leadership of the States in a cause that is not only dear to the hearts of her own people, but of the people throughout the Union. We believe that serious consideration of the several positions taken by the opponents of the conference can lead to but one conclusion. That is that they have not a leg to stand on. One by one their contentions have gone down before the facts of the case like houses of cards, When the call for the conference was issued the cry was raised that it was inspired by personal ambition, and that the gathering would be in the interest of some particular aspirant for senatorial honors. As to this, not only was a disthact disclaimer made by those most prominent in the movement, but an examination of the names in the aggregate signed to the call made it apparent that the cry was little less than absurd-that the opposition was frightened at a phantom of their own conjuring. Moreover, the manner in which the papers that gave support to the movement treated the subject, made it impossible for the signers of the call not to keep faith. Even if these had not intended from the beginning that the gathering should be exactly what they proclaimed it would be, the lines on which the supporting papers surtained the call put the signers in position any deviation from which would damn them in the eyes of the people Even if, in its incipiency, the movement did not represent a fight for a great principle-a fight for the reassertion of the doctrine that the people are the source of all power-the papers that have advocated the conference have made

Next, our friends of the opposition declared that the conference proposed to do comething unconstitutional. We give them credit for all honesty, but here they raised another phantom that melts away before the light of facts. The conference was called for—

"the purpose of adopting such measures as may be deemed best to promote the election of senators of the United States by the direct vote of the people, and, until that result is accomplished, the selection of party senatorial candidates by some popular method."

What does this mean? It means, first, that the conference proposes to give practical impetus to the sentiment in favor of a change in the Constitution that will admit of senators' being elected by the popular vote. Is there anything unconstitutional or revolutionary in that? Is there anything unconstitutional or revolutionary in the coming together of the people for the purpose of exercising the right of petition and appeal? As to the second object of the conference-what it hopes to accomplish pending an amendment to the Constitution-we let the Leesburg Washingtonian answer as to whether that is constitutional or not. The Washingtonian says:

"The argument that the expression of the people, by primary election, as to their choice for senator, is unconstitutional, is without force. The Constitution does not bar the people from expressing their choice for the members of either house of Congress. They can, by their orimaries, say whom they want, and when the delegates are elected to the Legisthe delegates are elected to the Legis-lature, they will, as the Constitution pro-vides, elect the senator they want, who will most certainly be the one whom they will have been commissioned by their constituents to elect.

"Were such a course unconstitutional we would be placed in the condition of not having had a constitutional-elected President for the last half a century or more, as in all our presidential elections the people vote to express their choice for President and Vice-President at the polls, and the electors merely perform a perfunctory duty in casting their votes for them in the Electoral College, which the Constitution requires to make the election legal."

Exactly. To this there is nothing to be added. It effectually disposes of the anti-constitutional contention.

But the contention upon which some of the opposition have rung the changes most vigorously is, that the May conference is a factional movement. There never was, from the outset, any ground for this contention. The assertion that it is factional for any man, or set of men, within the Democratic party to endeavor to infuse new life into a cardinal Democratic principle, is a contradiction in terms. The breaking down of the first two contentions of the opposition renders their third contention all the more unworthy of exerting influence, from any point of view it is looked at. However, granting for the sake of argument, that the movement was factional in the initlative, if we accept the opposition's definition of "faction," its growth and inoreasing popularity have resulted in putting the boot on the other leg. That is to say, the overwhelming sentiment in favor of the objects of the conference that has developed has made the opposition the faction.

In view of all this, will any man who favors "trusting the people" in so vital a matter be justified by the arguments of the opposition in holding aloof from the conference, if it shall be possible for him to attend? We think not. And we believe that calm reflection upon the anticonference contentions is all that is necessary to bring all waverers to our way of thinking, and to a decision in which in the future they will take pride.

If reports in the financial world be true, Andrew Carnegie is now the second richest man in the world. John D. Rockefeller being the only individual who can boast more wealth. Carnegle has just sold out his plant to the new Steel Trust, and this step on his part removes the last obstacle to a consolidation of practically all the steel-producing companies of the United States. This gigantic monopoly will now be the greatest combination of capital in Christendom. It will have a capital of $600,000,000, of which $100,000,000 will be in first mortgage 5 per cent, gold bonds: $250,000,000 in preferred stock, and $250,000,000 in common stock.

The multi-millionaire will receive all of the $100,000,000 in 5 per cent. bonds, and will forthwith wash his hands of "trade." Hereafter he will let business alone, and will seek to scuffle along with an income of $5,000,000 per annum. He announces his purpose to give away all his money before death overtakes him. It is stated invest so much money to advantage, and hence he accepted the terms mentioned above. Forty-seven years ago Mr. Carnegle was without friends or fertune, He rose from humble beginnings, being first a railroad employee at $10 a month, then an iron-mill foreman, then superintend ent, then junior partner, and finally head of one of the many Pittsburg mills. Charleston announces that everything is ready for the Confederate reunion. This means a great deal, coming from the Palmetto State metropolis. It is like the dinner bell of the old-fashloned southern home of hospitality, culture, and refine ment. It suggests all sorts of pleasant things, without any of the stiffness sometimes called "style," or of the form and ceremony often called upon to cover a lack of genuineness. It is an assurance of hearty welcome.

Miles is not only not sustained, but is harshly criticised by the army beef board. Of course. That's what the beef board was appointed for. And the President fully approves the court's findings. That is also according to programme. What a roaring farce the administration of our War Department has been during the past year! If we had had any other than a thoroughly decayed Power to deal with in the war we have had, what would have been our fate?

BEEF REPORT MADE PUBLIC. Refrigerated Meat Not "Embalmed"

Canned Beef "Unsuitable." By direction of the President, who apthe findings, Acting Secretary of War Meiklejohn on Sunday made public the report and findings of the military court appointed to investigate the charges made by Major-General Miles, commanding the army, that the beef supplied to the army during the war with Spain was unfit for the use of the troops.

The court has been dissolved. The most important leatures of the re-port are: The finding that the General's allegations that the refrigerated beef was treated with chemicals were not estab lished; that his allegations concerning the canned fresh or canned roast be were sustained as to its unsuitability for food as used on the transports, and a food as used on the transports, and as a long continued field ration; censure of General Miles for "error" in failing promptly to notify the Secretary of War when he first formed the opinion that the food was unfit; the declaration that the commanding General had no justification for his charges that beef was embalmed; censure of the Commissary-General (General Eagan) for "colossal error" in the too extensive purchase of the canned beef as an untried ration; censure of Colonel Maus, of General Miles's staff; the finding that the pack-ers were not at fault, and that the meats supplied to the army were of the same quality as those supplied to the trade generally, and the recommendation that no further proceedings be taken in the

NO FURTHER PROCEEDINGS.

NO FURTHER PROCEEDINGS.

The conclusion of the court adverse to further proceedings based upon the charges is as follows:

"It has been developed in the course of the inquiry, as recited in this report, that in some instances certain individuals failed to perform the full measure of duty or to observe the properties which dignify high military command, but the court is of the opinion that the mere statement in the official report of the facts developed meets the ends of discipline, and that the interests of the services will be best subserved if further proceedings be not taken."

The report takes up the interrogatories and remarks of the President, and answers them seriatim to the effect above stated

MILES HAS NOTHING TO SAY.
General Miles, when asked Sunday night whether he had any comment to make upon the beef report, replied that he had read it. "But I have nothing to say." he added, "either about the report, the method of taking testimony, or the conclusions reached."
"Does that mean that, so far as you are concerned, you will let the matter reat where the report leaves it?" asked the reporter.

"I have nothing to say," replied General Miles.

Shall It Be Only One Regiment?

(Staunton News.) Report comes from Richmond that

Governor Tyler is opposed to having a many regiments of volunteer militia a heretofore, and favors having only regiment, on which all the funds for military purposes shall be spent, making it a crack regiment in every respect.

This might be very nice for the companies belonging to that regiment, and in some respects be better for the State, as the soldiers would be able to cut a big-ger dash, but we do not believe it is good policy, taking it all round. It is better to have as many young men as possible to receive some military training. It is good for their health, and good for the prestige and strength of the State. Notwithstanding some disappointments, it is, nevertheless, best that the government should rely on the strength of its citizen soldiery.

There are a great many more young men, who wish to receive this training than can be accommodated in twelve companies, and we hope the policy of restriction will not prevail.

The Truth of History.

The Truth of History.

(Farmville Herald.)

Senator Quay was acquitted of a grave criminal charge by a jury of his peers, and John Wanamaker says:

"Knowing all this proof, emanating exclusively from the lips and pens of himself and his closest friends, and in the face of his own silence and failure to testify to his innocence, he was acquitted. This is a new chapter of shame for Pennsylvania, a new record of failure in the administration of justice, that will do much to encourage corruptionists and put us to shame throughout the country."

On this same day, however, the Governor of Pennsylvania appointed him to the high and honorable position of United States senator. His admirers shouted his praises while a "lonely" senator from Virginia sent him this telegram:

Richmond, Va. April 21, 1899.

Hon, M. S. Quay, Philadelphia, Pa.:

A lonely Republican State senator rejoiees and congratulates you on two righteous results—acquittal and appointment.

W. M. Flanagan.

Out of this mixture, what will the historian of the future give to future readers as the truth? Quay is a defiant criminal or a much-abused man.

Plenty of Objections.

(Staunton News.).

It is understood that the State Board of Pharmacy has raised objection to the lady physician at the Western State Hosting of the Company pital, acting as prescription clerk, she not having a license as pharmacist. There are a great many others in the State who object, but their objection rests on different grounds. They object to the board of the hospital, or whoever eise is responsible for it, side-tracking the lady physician by making a druggist clerk of her, at the same time letting the impression go out that the Western State Research in the female State Hospital is served in the female wards by a female physician, while no such thing is the case.
